SUBJECT OF THE DISPUTE

Non-payment of outstanding invoice amount following delivery of textile material. The claimant alleges that the respondent received the contracted goods, made a partial payment, and failed to clear the remaining invoice balance within the agreed payment period.

CAUSE OF DISPUTE

The dispute arose from a disagreement concerning the outstanding balance on a supply contract. Aarav Textiles Private Limited supplied 1,200 metres of cotton-blend textile fabric against Purchase Order No. BRG-PO-2026-118. The claimant states that the material was delivered on 15 April 2026 and that the buyer accepted the delivery without issuing a rejection notice.

The total contractual value was ■78,500. The buyer subsequently paid ■63,012, leaving an alleged balance of ■15,488. According to the claimant, the balance became payable by 30 April 2026. The claimant states that several payment reminders were issued but the balance was not cleared.

The respondent's position, as recorded for this test case, is that payment was withheld because the buyer's internal quality-control team reported inconsistencies in a portion of the supplied fabric and requested reconciliation with the supplier. The respondent disputes the characterization of the matter as a deliberate payment default and maintains that the outstanding amount was subject to commercial reconciliation.

The claimant states that it fulfilled its supply obligations under Purchase Order BRG-PO-2026-118 and delivered the agreed textile material. The claimant alleges that the respondent accepted delivery and subsequently paid only part of the invoice value. The remaining ■15,488 is claimed as an outstanding contractual receivable.

The claimant further states that the unpaid balance has remained outstanding despite reminders and requests for reconciliation. The claimant seeks settlement of the principal outstanding amount and reserves the right, subject to the applicable agreement and law, to seek any contractually permitted charges arising from delayed payment.

RESPONDENT'S POSITION

The respondent states that the payment was not withheld with an intention to avoid the commercial obligation. According to the respondent's fictional statement, the accounts department held the balance while the procurement team reviewed concerns relating to the consistency and quality of a portion of the supplied material.

The respondent indicates that it is willing to participate in commercial reconciliation and consider a settlement, subject to confirmation of the delivered quantity, quality observations, and the final outstanding amount.
